Overview

Ben Collins KC has an exceptionally diverse practice, appearing in landmark litigation, and recognised as a leading silk, in no fewer than five fields of practice: employment, professional discipline, clinical negligence, personal injury and administrative and public law. In 2020 he was named Pro Bono KC of the Year at the Bar Pro Bono Awards, and was shortlisted at The Lawyer Awards as Barrister of the Year.

The legal directories describe Ben as "an exceptional barrister... incredibly bright and a pleasure to work with." Ben has a high-profile practice in both private and public law, with particular expertise in employment, healthcare and regulatory work, although his practice spans public law and human rights, clinical negligence, medical law, personal injury, inquests and inquiries, sports disputes and professional negligence.

Ben has vast experience in employment and discrimination claims, with particular expertise in disability discrimination and other health-related issues (including mixed employment, regulatory, discrimination and personal injury claims). He has considerable experience of high-profile and high-value whistleblowing claims; and of public sector work in general. He appears very regularly in disputes involving doctors.

His disciplinary practice involves representing practitioners and professional bodies in professional conduct proceedings before regulatory bodies such as the GMC, GDC and ARB, as well as in judicial review challenges in the Administrative Court. He has appeared in university and police disciplinary proceedings, and has experience of major financial services regulatory work, including internationally (he appeared in the first contested hearing before the Financial Markets Tribunal in Dubai).

He is regularly instructed by both claimants and defendants in complex and high-value clinical negligence and personal injury claims. He has enormous experience in addressing medical issues and an in-depth understanding of the work of clinical professionals, as well as in meeting the needs of severely disabled claimants and their families. His case of Hughes v Rattan was named Outstanding Case of the Year at the Personal Injury Awards 2022.

Ben must be considered one of the leading experts in the law of criminal injuries compensation at the bar, having appeared in almost every major appeal in the field in the past decade, including A (SC, exclusion of criminal convictions), JT (CA, same roof rule), CP (CA, fetal alcohol syndrome), Jones (SC, crime of violence) and Y (CA, status of unborn child). He is consulting editor to Miers on Criminal Injuries Compensation (OUP).

His public law practice involves review of decisions in the fields of equality, medical law, professional regulation, industrial relations, mental health, coroners, prisons and immigration. He advised the Lord Chancellor on changes to the discount rate for personal injury damages, and defended APIL's judicial review of the rate. His work frequently encompasses human rights challenges.

He appears at inquests and public inquiries, most recently the Infected Blood Inquiry.

Recommendations

"His advocacy is elegant and simple but always to the point. He understands what really matters in a case, and this resonates with judges and his opponents. He navigates the most complicated of legal problems and provides real solutions." Chambers & Partners 2024

"Ben is extremely thorough and does not overlook a single detail, just what you need in highly complex multi-defendant extremely high-value personal injury cases." The Legal 500 2024

"One of the best – he has the courage and conviction to take on legally challenging cases that many barristers wouldn't touch. A real team player and a pleasure to work with." The Legal 500 2023

"Ben's advocacy is as good as it gets. Even on complex and contentious points, he has judges eating out of the palm of his hand – he is a pleasure to watch on his feet. In con and with clients, he is similarly good to work with – everything you could want from a silk." The Legal 500 2023

- Ben has contributed articles to JPIL, NLJ, ELA Review, Occupational Medicine, Judicial Review and Legal and Medical. He lectures regularly on a range of topics including employment and discrimination law, clinical negligence, human rights, medical law, professional discipline and civil procedure. He has led sessions at the ELA annual conference.

Employment & Discrimination

Ben is recognised by both Chambers & Partners UK and The Legal 500 as a leading employment law silk. He has extensive experience of a range of employment law claims. He represents large commercial and industrial respondents; public authorities (in particular central and local government); health service bodies and practitioners; higher education institutions; and claimants with high-value or complex claims.

He is frequently instructed in complex and high-value discrimination claims and has particular expertise in cases concerning disability and health issues. His human rights practice gives him a broad understanding of equality issues both within and beyond the employment sphere. He is often asked to advise public bodies on their equality obligations (flowing from the public sector equality duty, ECHR and discrimination legislation), as well as dealing with allegations of systematic and individual discrimination brought against them. He is experienced in claims relating to service provision discrimination.

Ben also appears regularly in claims concerning whistleblowing, TUPE, restraint of trade and all kinds of dismissals. He has wide experience of cases concerning the international jurisdiction of the employment tribunal.

Ben has an in-depth understanding of the workings of the health service and clinical professionals. He represents practitioners and trusts in internal disciplinary proceedings, High Court disputes and tribunal claims. His experience in professional regulation (in particular of the clinical professions), public law and clinical negligence contribute to his ability to represent parties to health-sector disputes with real effectiveness; not least given his long experience of working with medical experts.

Prior to taking silk, Ben was a member of the Attorney General's A Panel of counsel (and was a panellist in total for 13 years). He has appeared in some of the most significant and high-profile litigation brought against the government. He is a Special Advocate, has developed vetting security clearance and appears in employment and related disputes where national security is in issue.

Ben also has experience of representing professional footballers and managers in disputes with their present or former employers. He also has experience of claims involving rugby clubs.

Finally, Ben's experience of high-value personal injury and clinical negligence claims affords him particular expertise in dealing with complex issues on remedy, not least where psychiatric injury is alleged; or where long-term claims for loss of earnings arise. Ben has advised the Lord Chancellor on the current review of the discount rate and is skilled in dealing with large claims for future losses.

Ben is a member of ELA, ELBA and ILS, as well as Justice and Liberty.

Public Law

Ben has directory recognition as a leading public law silk, and has appeared in some of the most significant and high-profile litigation brought against the government, having appeared in a range of high-profile judicial reviews and appeals, including three Supreme Court cases in 2019-20. Prior to taking silk he was on the Attorney General's A Panel of Counsel, and was a panellist in total for 13 years. Ben also appears for individuals and regulatory bodies in judicial reviews of professional regulatory decisions.

Because Ben has a strong common law practice alongside his public law work, he has particular expertise in claims where claims for common law damages are made together with claims for public law and/or human rights remedies.

Ben has particular expertise in equality issues, by reference to the Public Sector Equality Duty, ECHR and discrimination law. He has advised on equality matters in relation to the new Criminal Injuries Compensation Scheme, the setting of the Discount Rate, Free Schools and the operation of public sector cuts.

Ben is a Special Advocate and has Developed Vetting security clearance. He appears in a range of disputes where national security is in issue, in both England and Northern Ireland.

Professional Regulatory & Discipline

Ben has directory recognition as a leading silk in this field. He has worked on cases concerning the healthcare sector throughout his career (as well as professional discipline, he works in the related fields of clinical negligence and medical employment disputes). He has vast knowledge of the work of clinical professionals and healthcare providers, having appeared in cases involving doctors, dentists, nurses, opticians, paramedics and other healthcare professions.

He is also instructed to deal with disciplinary disputes in non-health contexts, for example, in relation to the regulation of architects, actuaries, athletes, financial services, the police and universities.

He appears at internal disciplinary proceedings; hearings before regulatory bodies such as the MPTS, GDC and NMC; hearings in the FTT; and High Court challenges to the decisions of employers and regulators. He is one of the few UK practitioners to have appeared in the Financial Markets Tribunal of the DIFC (Dubai).

Notable Cases

- Sun v GMC [2023] EWHC 1515 (Admin). Appeal against erasure following allegations of dishonesty. Extension of time limit for appeal.

Clinical Negligence

Ben has directory recognition as a leading clinical negligence silk and leads the clinical negligence team at Old Square Chambers. He has worked on cases concerning the healthcare sector throughout his career and has huge knowledge of the work of clinical professionals and healthcare providers. Having earlier in his career practised for over 15 years at 1 Crown Office Row, clinical negligence has always been an important part of his work. He has appeared for both claimants and defendants in the widest range of claims, including appearing as lead counsel in many claims relating to catastrophic injuries.

He has particular experience of claims involving: cerebral palsy; and other obstetric and neonatal injuries; catastrophic brain injury; neurosurgery (including spinal surgery, cauda equina and the treatment of Chiari malformation); bariatric surgery and malnutrition; GP failures, including delayed diagnosis of meningitis; orthopaedic, vascular and cardiothoracic surgery; and gynaecology. The list is far from exhaustive – over the course of his career, Ben has worked on cases concerning a vast range of aspects of clinical care.

Ben is experienced in and knowledgeable about the particular demands of military claims, appearing both for service personnel and MOD.

Ben regularly represents clinicians, healthcare providers and families at inquests where questions of clinical care are in issue. His human rights practice is particularly valuable in this context, especially if detention (either under mental health law or in prison) is in issue.

Ben was instructed by the Trust in the Alder Hey Inquiry into the retention of organs. He is currently instructed in a number of claims arising out of the Infected Blood Inquiry.

Ben is member of the PNBA. He is a contributing editor to Professional Negligence and Liability, dealing with the liability of clinical professionals. He chaired the 2017 and 2019 AvMA Cerebral Palsy and Brain Injury Conferences.

Personal Injury

Ben is recognised as a leading personal injury silk and has long experience of dealing with personal injury claims. He appears as leading counsel in claims arising out of some of the most serious injuries, including when brain injury (both subtle and severe) is in issue.

Ben's extensive experience of clinical negligence claims (see separate entry) and his intimate knowledge of the healthcare sector provide him with great expertise in dealing with contested quantum issues. He has vast experience of working with medical experts and a detailed understanding of the interrelationship of medical expertise, care and occupational assistance and rehabilitation.

Ben has expertise in both employment and discrimination law and accordingly has notable expertise in dealing with mixed employment and personal injury cases arising out of stress, harassment and/or discrimination in the workplace.

Ben is experienced in and knowledgeable about the particular demands of military claims, appearing both for service personnel and MOD.

Ben has experience of large-scale mediation and of group actions, having been instructed by the MOD in the Kenyan Training Area claims group litigation and a range of claims arising out of the development of Q fever among service personnel in Afghanistan. He is currently instructed in a number of claims arising out of the Infected Blood Inquiry.

Ben must be considered one of the leading experts in the law of criminal injuries

Sport

Ben has appeared in complex and high-profile litigation involving sports professionals for many years, in particular in cases brought by footballers, rugby players, and Olympic and Paralympic athletes.

He sits as an appeal panel member in International Paralympic Committee anti-doping appeals.

Ben appears in employment disputes involving sports professionals, for example representing an England U21 football manager in a post-termination contractual dispute with the FA.

He has experience of representing professional footballers in claims for personal injury and clinical negligence. These high-value claims draw on Ben's strong PI and clinical negligence practice, together with an understanding of the professional career development and wage structure of elite sports professionals.

Outside the law, Ben is an RFU accredited rugby coach and a season ticket holder at Brighton & Hove Albion.

Inquests & Public Inquiries

Ben regularly represents clinicians, healthcare providers and families at inquests where questions of clinical care are in issue. His human rights practice is particularly valuable in this context, particularly if detention (either under mental health law or in prison) is in issue.

He also has substantial expertise in judicial review of coroners and coronial law, as well as in claims made under Article 2 ECHR.

Ben is currently instructed in a number of claims arising out of the Infected Blood Inquiry, having been instructed earlier in his career in the Alder Hey Public Inquiry.

HR Professional Support

Ben has practised in the fields of employment and disciplinary law for the last 20 years. He has represented both management and employees in a range of disciplinary and appeal hearings, and has advised managers, HR practitioners and boards as to the handling of employment and disciplinary issues. Ben has particular expertise in the public and health care sectors, but has worked with major private sector employers and regulators throughout his career. His practice has taken him from the Employment Tribunal to the Supreme Court, with a range of courts and tribunals along the way. He has been recognised by the legal directories as a leading silk in five different areas of practice.

Before taking silk, Ben was a member of the Attorney General's A Panel of Counsel. He is a Special Advocate and has extensive experience in dealing with issues of the greatest sensitivity. He sits as a panellist hearing anti-doping appeals for the International Paralympic Committee, and as a Recorder, hearing criminal cases in the Crown Court.
