Overview

Katharine Newton KC is an experienced and highly regarded practitioner who appears regularly in the employment tribunal, High Court and the appellate courts including the Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court. Prior to taking silk, Katharine was the Chambers & Partners Employment Junior of the Year 2018, and the only junior barrister to appear in The Lawyer Hot 100 2018. Katharine is regularly instructed in high-profile, high-value and complex employment and discrimination claims across a wide range of sectors and her practice over recent years has included some of the most high-profile cases litigated at the Employment Law Bar.

Katharine acts for both employers and employees in every area of employment law, including discrimination of all types, whistleblowing, victimisation, unfair and wrongful dismissal, TUPE, breach of contract, restrictive covenants, wages and trade union industrial disputes. She acts for a broad range of clients covering the whole spectrum, from large corporate clients, banking and financial institutions, media organisations, royalty, NHS employers, trade unions and local authorities to the full range of Claimants including both individual Claimants and cases involving multi-Claimant test cases. Katharine also has experience in advising on discrimination claims in the "goods and services" sphere. Full details of Katharine's experience can be found in the "Employment and Discrimination" section of her profile.

Katharine also has extensive experience in conducting both disciplinary and grievance investigations, as well as undertaking department and employer-wide reviews of practice and procedure. Katharine's investigatory reports have been repeatedly praised by judges in subsequent employment tribunal proceedings. Katharine also has experience of advising and presenting cases at internal disciplinary, grievance and appeal hearings, and sitting as a Chair of internal disciplinary and complaints panels. Full details of Katharine's experience can be found in the "investigations" sections of her profile.

Katharine has considerable experience of professional disciplinary cases before various regulatory bodies including hearings before the Medical Practitioners Tribunal Service (MPTS), Health and Care Professions Council (HCPC), Nursing and Midwifery Council (NMC) and the General Teaching Council (GTC). Full details of Katharine's experience can be found in the "Professional Regulatory & Discipline" section of her profile.

Katharine regularly appears as an advocate in mediations of all types where she has acted for various parties in a wide range of disputes including discrimination, whistleblowing and High Court contractual claims.

Employment & Discrimination

Katharine is recognised by both Chambers & Partners and The Legal 500 in employment law and prior to taking silk, was the Chambers & Partners Employment Junior of the Year in 2018. Katharine is regularly instructed in high-profile, high-value and complex discrimination and whistleblowing claims, including many lasting in excess of 20 days. In a number of cases, the other side have withdrawn their claims and/or conceded their case after Katharine has cross-examined their witnesses. In addition, Katharine has a busy appellate practice and appears in the EAT, Court of Appeal and the Supreme Court on employment law matters, particularly those involving important points of legal principle affecting large sections of the UK workforce such as the Deliveroo "gig economy" test case on employment status.

Katharine's experience encompasses a wide range of sectors, but she has
