Overview

Overview

Lord Hendy KC was called to the Bar in 1972 and after establishing and running a law centre for three years and lecturing for a year, he started practice in 1977 and took silk in 1987. He is, without a doubt, best known for his work in industrial relations and employment law, having appeared in most of the UK's leading collective labour law cases in the last 45 years.

Recent comments in the Directories say:

Chambers & Partners 2021: "He has an unrivalled knowledge of trade union laws and rights, and he has repeatedly put that knowledge to good use when defending workers and their unions." "He has the complete respect of the judiciary and it is no exaggeration to say that he is a giant at the Bar. He is the man for the hardest and most controversial cases which require tremendous courage and intellectual stamina."

Legal 500 2019: "He is a Rolls-Royce amongst the senior echelons of the Bar."

Chambers & Partners 2019: "He is just phenomenal: his cross-examinations are a joy to behold." "A go-to barrister for trade unions and one of the foremost experts in the area of industrial relations."

Legal 500 2018: he "combines exceptional powers of reasoning with compassion and humanity" and "his manner with both clients and the court is exemplary."

Who's Who Legal 2018: he is "unparalleled in all matters of collective labour law" and "a sonorous courtroom presence, which commands respect".
